

Pensri Boonsuwane was born in a Theravada Buddhist community in Thailand. She came from a long line of teachers, monks, and nuns. Her country is primarily of the Buddhist religion, and so is her family. Pensri's Grandmother was a lifelong practicing nun. After her mother passed at a young age, her father became a lifelong Buddhist Monk until he died after serving several decades in the monastery as a well-respected Monk.

Naturally, she has been following in her family's values and footsteps through her life.

At the age of 42, she checked herself into a Buddhist Temple where she began dedicating her life to the heart felt desire of sharing the Eastern philosophies and living her life as a practicing Buddhist.

Since then, she has taught meditation and classes about Buddhism in both countries of Thailand and the USA.

At the age of 68, the Thai government has acknowledged her as an official Representative of Thailand as well as an Ambassador of the Thai culture in the USA.
